Internet site of the week

Tony Waltham

This section should, perhaps, be called "Site of the Day" _ and this would refer to the coming Sunday. For, once a year, _ www.bfranklin.edu becomes a gateway to a world of interactive learning on Global Learning Day, which is now in its seventh year and on Sunday November 16 at 7 a.m. the 24-hour GLD 7 "show" will begin.

The Mission

Representatives from Thailand will be joining in again, and at 9 a.m. Bangkok time Dr B.K. Passi, Dr Hashi Passi and change consulting company Prasena's research director Isabelle Michelet will speak on the topic: "4th Wave Education _ A Dream or Reality?" They will be joining scores of presenters around the world at GLD, where the theme is global education and bridging the global divide.

As an Internet portal, GLD enables a global audience to connect and to listen to the presentations, to view "slides" online and to interact during question and answer sessions, both with the keyboard and a microphone. Last year, I took a ringside seat during this global spectacle _ with just a dial-up connection _ and I was impressed both by the power of the virtual conferencing software and the quality and diversity of presentations.

So, visit GLD 7 on Sunday and experience what is undoubtedly the way that meetings will evolve to be as we get bigger displays and have more bandwidth to play with. Educators and anyone interested in the state of learning in our world should find the content here compelling.
